Customers who meet the income guidelines may qualify for a one-time annual benefit, which could mean savings on your electric bills. Many Emera Maine customers benefit from the program each year.

How do I find out if I qualify?

If your total household income does not exceed the federal poverty guidelines, you should contact your nearest Community Action Program (CAP) office to apply for the Low Income Home Energy Assistance Program (LIHEAP) and be certified for the Low Income Assistance Program. It is important to note that the Federal Poverty Guidelines may increase upon guidance from the Federal Government.

Are there any restrictions?

Yes. Customers who receive housing subsidies are not eligible to participate. To learn of restrictions that may apply to you, check with your local agency.

How should I apply?

In order to apply, you will need to make an appointment by calling the office nearest you (please see the list at right). The LIHEAP program year runs from October 1 through April 30. Contact your local agency to learn more about application deadlines and for guidance.

The Low Income Assistance Program year runs from October 1 through September 30. LIAP program guidelines require existing program participants to recertify eligibility.
